Spirit of the Games: Excellence through competition.

How does your sport exemplify these values?

The structure of the competition allows teams and individuals to progress — the passion shown by competitors to achieve this is evident throughout the day's competition.

As competitors are always placed against opponents of a similar ability, they must respect their opponent to overcome them.

Fair play and honesty are integral to Panathlon and a special award exists to recognise those displaying these values in the competitions.

By competing against opponents of a similar ability, all competitors taking part should know that they have a great opportunity to win and so they should believe in themselves every time they take part.

As competitors take part in different events that make up the Panathlon, the team has to support each other and understand how their team mates are contributing to the overall score.

As Panathlon is a team and individual activity, competitors must be determined to do their best at all times, for themselves and for their team mates.
